

Wedding in the Kingdom

Once upon a time in a vast land there lived two young people in two different cities a great distance apart. The young woman lived in the city at the edge of the land by the sea and the young man lived in the city deep in the heart of the land, across the river. The man did not know of the woman and the woman did not know of the man. There was no one in the entire land who knew both young people, neither friend nor enemy except one person. And that was the King.

Now the King of all that land and even the seas had a plan for those two people, though the young people did not know the King even thought of them. But there came a time that the young man's many travels took him to a little town nestled in a valley. It just so happened that the young woman was passing through that town. Naturally, they met. And naturally, they fell in love.

It was a truly special day when they decided to get married. But the day became glorious when they were approached by none other than the King who revealed to them, to their astonishment, that it was He who had orchestrated their meeting. He explained that He wanted all the people in His Kingdom to be happy and that He really cared about them.

The King invited the young couple to His magnificent palace and they gladly accepted His invitation. Naturally, they lived happily ever after.
